

PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS: Customer Service Week has been formally observed in the United States since 1992, in recognition of the immense impact customer service and customer service professionals have on our system of free enterprise, the American consumer and the economy; and

WHEREAS: Customer service professionals, often the primary point of contact for consumers and clients, are an integral part of the customer experience and a company's success. They are relied upon to meet customer needs and to adjust to an ever-changing market; and

WHEREAS: As we compete to remain leaders in the changing global economy, excellent customer service delivers an important advantage over foreign contenders. Excellent customer service should be a priority of every American employee, business and industry, as we work toward economic longevity; and

WHEREAS: Customer service representatives are a part of the American consumer's daily routine, from buying groceries, to paying bills, to receiving answers to important questions; and

WHEREAS: Jacksonville residents benefit greatly from the customer experience and economic growth supported by customer service professionals here and around the country.

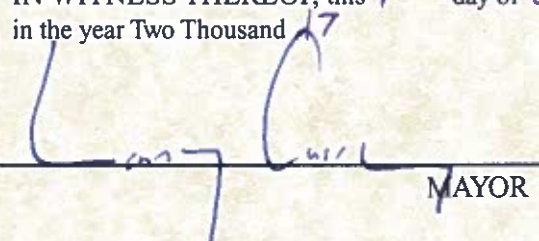

NOW, THEREFORE, I, LENNY CURRY, by virtue of the authority vested in me as mayor of Jacksonville, Florida, do hereby proclaim the week of October 2-6, 2017 as in Jacksonville and encourage all citizens to recognize and honor the exceptional work done by dedicated service center employees daily.

IN WITNESS THEREOF, this 1st day of October in the year Two Thousand 17

MAYOR

CITY OF JACKSONVILLE, FLORIDA
